Survey on Education Provision in English Language in Italian Universities Year 2007

Edited by Massimo Carfagna and Marina Cavallini

Since the end of the last decade, the European academic institutions have been involved in a new movement towards internationalization, and the European university systems have been working towards the creation of a “European Higher Education Area”. This process – known as “Bologna Process” - is still under continuous progress and improvement and is developed on a number of aspects, including the promotion of student mobility. Student mobility is not only a goal, but also a potential drive of the integration process started in the framework of the Bologna Process.

The international mobility of students, which is not limited within the European Union borders, finds a more fertile ground where foreign students can count on linguistically accessible education, which usually coincides with the availability of courses in English language .

Besides the objectives related to Erasmus students, or students leaving their country to attend an entire degree course abroad, there are also other reasons for Universities to provide courses in English language. In fact, the provision of education opportunities in English language to national students can add value to University courses, with the purpose of familiarizing future graduates with international literature, which traditionally uses the English language as its diffusion tool.

In this scenario, the Conference of Italian University Rectors (Conferenza dei Rettori delle Università Italiane-CRUI) decided to regularly monitor the provision of education opportunities in English language by Italian Universities, through specific annual surveys.

The following pages report the results of the third annual survey and provide a picture of the Italian University system with reference to the availability of first and second cycle degree programmes (“Laurea” and “Laurea Specialistica”), professionally-oriented post-graduate courses (“Master Universitario”), research doctorate (“Dottorato di Ricerca”) and winter/summer schools in English language . According to this survey, Italian Universities show poor propensity to provide “Laurea” degree and “Laurea Specialistica” degree courses in English language. However, fairly good vitality has been found in the provision of study opportunities in English language in post-graduate courses (research doctorate and professionally-oriented named “Master Universitario”).

Table 1. Education opportunities in English language in Italian universities – Year 2007

Education opportunities in English language	No. of Universities	No. of Courses
Availability of first-cycle three-year degree programmes or single units within the first cycle programmes	16	-
- of which: availability of at least one full degree programme	8	12
Availability of second-cycle two-year degree programmes or single units within the second cycle programmes	21	-
- of which: availability of at least one full degree programme	14	38
Availability of at least one research doctorate programme	24	189
Availability of at least one professionally-oriented post-graduate course (“Master Universitario”)	34	106
Winter/summer schools	20	56

“Laurea” (first-cycle) programmes

Degree courses in English language or single units in English language in three-year programmes (“Laurea”) are available in 16 universities (only 8 of them provide full degree programmes in English language for a total number of 12 degree courses, mainly in faculties of economics).

Degree programmes are with fixed maximum number of students (“numerus clausus”) in the universities of Bolzano, Milano Bocconi, and Politecnico di Torino.

Table 2. Education opportunities in English language in Italian universities – Year 2007 (“Laurea”)

University	Degree courses or single units	Faculties
Bergamo	6 units	Economics

“Laurea Specialistica” (second-cycle) programmes

Single didactic units in English language within the second-cycle programmes, or full second-cycle programmes are available in 21 universities. However, only 14 universities provide at least one full second-cycle degree course in English language, so a total of 38 courses are available at the national level, mainly in the faculties of engineering, economics, and sciences.

The courses available at the Universities of Bologna, Bolzano, Milano Bocconi, Politecnico di Milano, Perugia, and Roma “La Sapienza” are with fixed maximum number of students (“numerus clausus”).

“Dottorato di Ricerca”(Research Doctorate) programmes

24 Italian Universities provide Research Doctorate programmes entirely in English language and mainly regarding disciplines connected with physical and natural sciences, supported by a fairly good availability of courses also in the medical and engineering fields.

The total number of courses is 189, only 8 of which provided by universities in southern Italy: Bari, Cagliari, Lecce and Napoli.
